Travelling on a shoestring budget

Some young people wish to travel and see the world, but cannot spend much money. That means keeping the costs down. Read about the experience of travellers from different countries.

Maja from Berlin:

I like to travel as a backpacker or couchsurfer. A few years ago I found an interesting website which offered: "We challenge you to travel Britain cheaper by public transport!"

I decided on The Backpacker Tour Company which offers tours to all parts of the UK. The coach routes, however, are not hop-on, hop-off, so we couldn't stop in some places we liked. We only booked the basic tours and had to pay some extra money for food and entrance fees.

So our journey was much cheaper than some other backpacker coach tours.

Nevertheless, this was a great experience. Our guides were full of knowledge and had a good sense of humour. The scenery was absolutely beautiful and I couldn't recommend a better company to travel with. I will definitely be coming back.

Karel from Prague:

I've been a couchsurfer for six years.

Over the years I've had lots of guests. One of my favourites were four Hungarians. When I came back after work, the house was empty. – Suddenly, they came in with nine bags full of food! In their culture, you cook dinner for your hosts. They made some great Hungarian food and we spent the next few hours chatting in my kitchen.

I only had one negative experience with couchsurfing: In Morocco, we had to wait for our host. The area around with dark streets and damaged houses looked scary. It was getting late. As we didn't know Arabic or even French, we couldn't communicate with the people around. Our host ignored our calls. When we finally reached him, he told us to take the bus to the centre because he was not going to host us!

Nigel from California:

If you travel through the countryside of the USA, it can be difficult to find low-price accommodation. That's why my friend and I decided to camp.

You can rent a campsite for extremely low rates. Usually this includes a grill for cooking, space for tents, a toilet and a shower area.

Last year we travelled through California and did not have the space for any camping equipment. So we rented a tent at a Yosemite campsite.

Our fully equipped tent was in the middle. We were close to the river, so that was great. We often went there for the great scenery.

Bicycles are the best method to really enjoy all of the wonders of Yosemite.

People told us there would be bears in the area but we didn't see any.
